1. The military hospital of the Sixth Army is located in Marshal Tito Street in Sarajevo. It is equipped with two thousand beds, and although it is supplied with the latest medical equipment and medicines, the amount thereof is not sufficient to cover the needs. As a result, scarce medicines and drugs are kept for emergencies, or saved for the eventuality of a war.
2. The Sixth Army hospital employs approximately twenty Army doctors, some of whom are women. Some of the doctors on the staff are listed as follows:
 - a. Major Pinto, chief of the internal (sic) department;
 - b. Captain Najdanovic, on the staff of the internal (sic) department;
 - c. Captain Laura Sprung; and
 - d. Captain Nada Miric, nee Levi.
3. The Sixth Army hospital is under the jurisdiction of the sanitation section of the rear echelon command of the Sixth Army. The chief of this section is Colonel Moni Levi, a doctor.
